

On June 10th, 2012, I was invented by the most famous engineer in the world. Better yet, I was claimed to be the most cutting-edge cellphone with numerous functions. Due to the wonderful functions I owned, I considered myself the best assistant for people. Yet, little did I know that my existence would lead my owner to an extremely awful predicament.

No sooner had my brothers and I released than we had been bought in two hours. At that moment, we took pride in ourselves, and determined to prove how splendid we were. My owner, Mark, bought me and my brother. He gave my brother for his girlfriend as a birthday present. Receiving the smartphone, she got estastic, being eager to try all of the functions. Mark and his girlfriend walked toward the cram school together while indulging themselves in using me and my brother. Initially, we felt cheerful, and confident! Nevertheless, on account of not taking heed of the situation of the road, Mark's girlfriend bumped into a tree, bled massively, and my brother fragmented into pieces. What was worse, Mark did not notice his girlfriend get injured because of listening to the music by me. Seeing what tragedy my brother facing, I gradually lost my ambitious. Instead of showing off how great I could be, I made every effort to prevent him from trying me. No matter how hard I had moved my body, it seemed to have no ^{movements} for him. No matter how loudly I had yelled out, he could not hear me. No matter how severely I had damaged my functions, he still had others to play with. Everything I had attempted to stop him was of no use! All of a sudden, a man driving a car rapidly toward us, as if he flew into a rage, hurried to somewhere, and not decided to slow down. Frightened and dumbfounded, I was caught in a coma.

As luck would have it, I shutted down because of losing my consciousness. Mark stopped paying his full attention to me, saw the car, jumped toward the sidewalk, and got a narrow escape! I abruptly realized how dangerous I could become!
