

Gary, his wife and two kids got down their taxi only to find a huge crowd flocking at the entrance of a local mall that would be having their anniversary sale today. It was currently 10:58, two minutes before the opening of the front doors, so Gary hurriedly squeezed through hundreds of people to be the very first ones that could get all the juicy deals. People around his family all had expressions on their face that was mixed with genuine excitement and impatience. Finally, at exactly 11:00, the doors were opened by guards and people came flooding in like hungry predators who just couldn't wait to get their hands on good products at low prices. Once inside, Gary quickly ran towards the kitchenware section while his wife rushed towards the cosmetic ones. In a total of two minutes, the mall was filled with all kinds of people bargaining for better deals, and the workers and guards all knew that it was going to be a long day ahead of them.

Finishing his first purchase, Gary suddenly realized that his two kids weren't with him. He quickly made a call to his wife to ensure his kids' safety but to no avail. All kinds of hazardous incidents his kids could face emerged in his mind and he couldn't help but feel shivers up his spine. Filled with anxiety, Gary ran through the crowds to the speakers system, providing the lady with their names. However, to his disappointment, there was still no sight of his children after a couple of minutes. Devastated, he decided not to sit and wait, but to search for them himself. Running through stores and stores, to his great relief, he eventually found his wife and two kids standing in front of a video game set. Catching his breath and walking up to his beloved family, he vowed to himself never to be such a irresponsible father ever again.
