

Last Saturday was the department store's anniversary. There were huge discounts and plenty of activities, which appealed to many people. Before the store was open, there had already been a long line of people waiting outside. The moment the doors opened, people poured into the store and rushed to get the goods at a discounted price. Every floor of the department store was filled with a sea of people. Clerks were busy promoting their products while customers listened with interest. Mr. Lim was one of the customers. He saw the anniversary's advertisement and decided to get himself a new pair of shoes. Luckily, he found a pair of black boots that he really liked, and bought them at a 15% off price. "It's really a bargain!" he thought. However, just when he was waiting <sup>at the bus station</sup> to return home, he found that something was wrong.

Mr. Lim put his hands into his jacket pockets, and gasped in shock. "My wallet!" he whispered, as he searched his pocket again. Still, his wallet was nowhere to be found. "I still had it when I was at the shoe store," Mr. Lim thought, "could it be stolen?" Finally, he decided to go back to the shoe store to see if he left his wallet here or not. To his surprise, the shop owner recognized him at once, and said, "Oh! You're back for your wallet. Right?" Mr. Lim sighed in relief, and thanked the shop owner over and over <sup>again</sup>. On the bus to home, Mr. Lim was happy that his wallet was back with him and told himself to be more careful with his personal belongings.

背面可繼續作答

小个侍書為考生姓名、應試號碼或與答案無關之叉子或付號。

裝訂區切勿作答