

It was late in the evening, and Jack was writing his homework at the counter of a small noodle stand owned by his mother. Then, a middle-aged man dressed in a suit came in and ordered a bowl of noodles. Since the man was sitting close to Jack, Jack took the opportunity to chat with him. Through their conversation, Jack learned that the man was not a local and would be heading for the train station after he finishes his dinner. Soon enough, the man gulped down the last of his noodles and set off for the station. Then, as Jack helped her mother wipe the table, he noticed that the man had forgotten his handbag. Out of curiosity, Jack opened the bag only to find it stuffed with cash. Both Jack and his mother found it suspicious and Jack soon recalled a local bank robbery which occurred in the afternoon. Without hesitation he quickly informed the police that a possible suspect of the bank robbery is heading for the station. Before long, the police found the man and arrested him. After confirming the man was guilty, the police put him into custody. Since then, Jack has been highly praised for helping the police solve the bank robbery.
