

2. John is a conner, who has been making money through the means of deceiving people into investment. As usual, he talked some filthy rich entrepreneur into buying a seemingly lucrative stock and persuaded him that he would be a fool letting go such an opportunity. Without giving it a second thought, he happily gave John a hundred million dollars, in cash.

After getting the money, John was ready to escape, but he was extremely hungry that he couldn't help stopping at a noodle store. It was run by a single mother who has a boy. John was really satisfied and full after finishing his bowl of noodle that he forgot his money! It was not until he reached the train station that did he remember he had lost it. He tried going back to retrieve it, but it was too late. The mother and her son found the bag and were shocked by so much money that they reported to the police. In the meanwhile, the entrepreneur had found out that John was nothing but a conner, so he went to the police reporting being deceived. Believe it or not, the three of them reported to the police at the same instant and successfully caught John, the big fat liar, at the noodle store.