

21 One day, John was doing his homework at his mother's noodles restaurant. In the restaurant, there were no one else but John, his mother and a fat middle-aged man who swallowed his meal quickly, as if he had planned a scheme of committing crimes. Next to the man was a big and stuffed bag, which the man protected so seriously that John was nearly punched by the man for touching this mysterious and precious bag. All of a sudden, a police car rang its bell violently near the restaurant, where the man dashed out in panic without paying money. Having astonished by the man's move, John and his mother had no choice but clean up the leftovers. At the same time, they saw the mysterious bag left on the chair! However, the man had gone to the Hsin Chu Train Station already. It was when he stepped into the train station to buy tickets that he noticed his precious bag was missing. In despair and overwhelming dismay, he banged his way to the restaurant, seeking for the bag. To his disappointment, however, John had called the police owing to finding a large amount of money in the bag of a suspicious man. At the moment when the man arrived at the restaurant, he was shot by the police and was soon arrested. The police told John that the fat man was a financial criminal, who was going to own the money illegally by doing money laundry. He had bankrupted a company, sold all the stocks and left many people unemployed. In listening to the police's statement, a sense of achievement surged into John's mind because he had helped the implement of justice and he was delighted that an ordinary teenager could also facilitate a better social environment. From then on, John had determined to be a policeman, who captured notorious criminals all around the world.