Dear Barbie :

I know that it is very strange that I write you a letter. You may think it will be more convenient for me to communicate with you in the computer game on the Internet, but this is why I write this letter. I want to tell you that I won't play the computer game anymore.

I remember that we started to play the computer game together when we were elementary school students. We have had a really good time and created many memories on the Internet. However, now I start to feel the game becomes more and more boring. Every day I just turn on the computer, enter the game, kill monsters, kill other players, and get the fake money. It never changes! Now I can't find any reason for me to stay up late, ignore my schoolwork, and even be blamed by my parents just to play the computer game! I know you may not be able to understand my thought though we have done the same things for the computer game, but this is my determination. Now I am going to start a new life. I will study harder, spend more time with my family and friends, and do more exercise instead of sitting in front of my computer. I believe that the change will make me better and healthier. But there is a disadvantage in my new plan which is that I can't often meet you, my best friend, in the future. Therefore, I really hope that you can join me! Let's don't waste any more time on the computer game and do something more meaningful! We can go out to play basketball on the weekends or go to the library together. I believe that with more face to face interaction we will become even better friends. How do you think? I am waiting for your response.

Yours,
Jill
