Sunlight stretched elegantly upon the earth, lacquering everything with a touch of its golden beams. The birds were chirping a cheerful tune on the trees, while the wind gently caressed the rattling leaves. It was yet another cool spring morning. A mother and her cute little daughter, were appreciating the beauty which the world had to offer. They admired the harmonious symphony God had created in awe. However, two reckless students were too indulged in themselves that they didn't even bother to pay attention to the world.

Tim and Sue were that two petulant teenagers. They had been a couple for two years. Recently, they were <sup>so</sup> addicted to their mobile phones that they started to neglect each other. They usually chatted happily and shared the bitter and sweets of life on their way to school, hand in hand. the tasks. As for Tim, he was always listening to his favorite band - The Wanted's songs. He preferred to put on headphones and turn the volume to the maximum, and danced to the rhythm and beats as if nobody were beside him.

This time, luck wasn't on their side. Sue bumped right onto a big oak tree, and her forehead instantly swollen up. She rubbed her painful head and found out that she got several bruises. On the other hand, Tim nearly encountered a car accident. With the music playing loudly, he failed to notice a series of furious honks from a taxi driver. They were both startled and realized how careless <sup>and foolish</sup> they had been. They were fortunate enough to <sup>have the chance to</sup> root out their bad habits before something fatal really happened.

As the day dragged on. Their sense of guilt and regret urged them to put away their precious cell phones. The sun became a reddish-orange orb on the west horizon, leaving the clouds painted with a faint hue of twilight. Tim and Sue telepathically looked at each other, with love and contentment. Without meaningless distractions, they were able to cherish each other with every peice of their heart. Without the time-wasting gadgets, they finally could start to take in the seemingly normal but breathtaking sceneries in daily life. This lesson and memory would be deeply engraved in the depths of their hearts, forever.
