Some people think that it is the parents<sup>that</sup> need to take full responsibility for house cleaning, and all the children have to do is to pay attention on their academic performances. While others consider house chores the whole family's obligation that no one should be left behind. As far as I am concerned, every member in the family should do their parts to maintain the environment of their house. For kids, it is of great importance that they learn to do chores when they are little. It teaches them to become more responsible in a group and indeed help them to be more independent after moving out in the future. For husband and wife, equality on every aspect stabilize their marriage. Doing the same proportion of home chores is definitely crucial when two people<sup>desides to</sup> live together for the rest of their lives.

the dishes and I took out the garbage as well. As time went by, I am now in charge of recycling all the bottles, paper and so on. Moreover, I clean the bathroom once in a while, since my parents are unable to bend down for a long while anymore. As annoying as house chores sometimes may be, I still do my best to clean the house. Everytime when I think of my mom's backache and my dad's hurt knees, I cannot help but to do as much as possible to relieve their stress and pain. As long as I can help my parents, unpleasant chores can turn into delightful jobs.
