

At a time of economic recession, people concern the tight budget whatever they do. If I could spend a day without worrying about budgets, I would spend it with my parents. In the past years, my parents had never been abroad and had never purchased luxuries as well. It would be great if I could have a day with them without spending on a budget.

I would spend the day with my parents in Space. Perhaps a day is too short for traveling to all the countries, yet it is sufficient for a spaceship to orbit the Earth. When revolving the Earth, we would take photos and see how the planet we live on looks. We could also experience how to live without gravity! What's more, how memorable it would be to take a close look at the planet in our galaxy and enjoy such breathtaking sights. However, living a day without concerning budgets is only a dream. In the future, I will try to earn enough money and make the seemingly impossible dream come true.
