

It has been a long time since the last time I spent an entire day with my family because of the exams. Therefore, if I can have twenty-four hours to do whatever I want without any concerns, I'll definitely invite my parents to share this special day with me. In the past few weeks, I stayed at the library almost every weekend, and when I finally got home at ten o'clock, I was too tired to do anything with my family. I hope this special day can serve as the bridge that connects my parents and I after this exhausting year makes us a little bit like strangers.

When I was in the first grade of senior high, there was a class tour to Green Island. Though it was kind of hot there, the beautiful view always made me forget ^{about} the scorching sun and my wet T-shirt. I always hope that one day I can be there with my parents, but since it's a very long way from Taipei, I used to keep those thoughts in my daydream. However, now if I'm given the chance to have a perfect day without the need to worry about the budgets, I'll undoubtedly take my family to Green Island. We can go scuba diving and appreciate the colorful coral reef by day, and we can see stars scattering all over the sapphire blue sky by night. In the harmonious atmosphere without the noise from cars and buzzing crowds, we can tell each other all our feelings. The glittering ocean under the bright sun can be the best background for our family talk! I'll try my best to make this dream come true after all the exams come to an end. I feel so light-hearted just by thinking about spending this special day with all my beloved families.