The smart glasses would be the product of choice. First, with a pair of smart glasses, I will be equipped with the ability to see through any items, from the sophistication of the latest technologies to the delicate symmetry of the body parts of creatures. They allow me to explore the unknown, marvel at nature, and deepen my knowledge. Second, smart glasses enable me to record where I've been to and what I've gazed upon or laid my hands on. Bitter or sweet, they faithfully record the incidents of my everyday life. I firmly believe that with smart glasses, even after years go by, the memories would be documented and linger on.

On the other hand, even though the invisibility cloak can protect me from any outside risk, I don't feel drawn to it. Its biggest appeal is also its greatest disadvantage. The visibility cloak isolates me from the outside world, but in the meanwhile alienates me from my loved ones. The shadowy, lonesome universe is the last thing I want to possess. Also, there are problems on the horizon. The invisibility cloak can be turned into a crime tool. Some will take advantage of it to sneak into any place, either for ill-gotten gains or the violation of privacy. The social problems possibly resulting from the invisibility cloak will deal a blow to our safety. To sum up, smart glasses have a lot to offer, while the invisibility cloak remains an issue of debate.
