If I were presented those two objects, I would choose the invisibility cloak without hesitation. Everytime I read the J.K. Rowling's best-seller Harry Potter, I am itching to put on the invisibility cloak once on myself. Moreover, this invisibility cloak has another cool feature — preventing you from fire and water! In this way, I can put on the cloak and go wander in the volcanoes with steaming lava. With this cloak, I can also use it to sneak in to other places, I am really attracted to those places where people put a huge sign reading "Stay Out! Confidential!" on the huge steel doors, such as secret labs or government offices. If I had the cloak, I can follow somebody inside without being seen. Then I can get full tour on my own! all the movies are being shot in Hollywood. Normally it wasn't open to tourists (unless you are a prince or the relative of the actors), but with the invisibility cloak I can get in with ease. Mere imagination of seeing all the stars filming gives me goosebumps of excitement. I can join Jennifer Aniston doing make up, or ^{see} Johnny Depp practicing his lines — only that they won't be able to see me, but it's already good enough!

I wouldn't choose the smart glasses because it is not as good as the invisibility cloak, and I think it's kind of creepy to see stuff behind obstacles. If I wore this pair of glasses to the restroom, then I will be seeing people naked! That's a little disgusting. Besides, I am not very impressed by the function of recording all the places you have been. To me, it's just a more high-class camera with videotaping function. Also, the smart glasses might provoke a problem on privacy. With this pair of glasses, you can see through walls and doors. There might be some private moments you might capture, such as people taking baths. It is not a very moral thing to intrude others' privacy. In a nutshell, the cloak is much cooler ^{than} the glasses and much useful to me, that's why I will choose the cloak over the glasses.
