If I have the opportunity to be granted with one of these high-tech products, I would like to own the smart glasses. I have to admit ^{that} it is really precious to have every moment in your life recorded. Sometimes, I try to recall the touching or memorable minutes but found that I couldn't remember it all. For example, after the class reunion, I could only describe it as a fun event but couldn't tell why it is fun. With this device, all my memories will be classified in different documents. All I have to do is click the mouse and I can recall all my sweet memories. Beside this, I could also examine my deeds in my daily life. Did I talk ^{to my friends} in an arrogant manner? Or did I hurt someone else's feeling? Although I couldn't turn back the clock and change what I've done, I could compensate the ones I hurt the next day. Another function of this smart glasses is even cooler, but less practical to me. I think that if one day, I join a rescue team, it will have great use. Since I can see the all the objects behind a barrier, I could accurately locate those who are stuck in the debris, and quickly save them from their sufferings.

I believe that most people are familiar with the invisibility cloak in Harry Potter. Though it helped Harry found out many secrets, we know that sometimes he use it on impractical jokes. I don't think that there is anything I have to do so secretly that no one should ever see, and that is why I prefer the smart glasses to the invisibility cloak. On top of this reason, I'm afraid that some vicious people would steal my cloak for committing crime. Since no one is able to see them and the person in the cloak is well protected, it is likely that they use it for some evil deeds. To avoid becoming a helper of a crime, I would not like to own it.
