

If I ever had the chance to choose between the invisibility cloak and the smart glasses, I would go for the smart glasses. Its features are simply irresistible! I've always wished that I could take pictures with my eyes, and this would be just the right gadget to make this fantasy come true. I'm quite interested in biology, especially animals and plants in the wild. With the smart glasses, I can easily roam the wilderness, and observe the wildlife without disturbing them or scaring them away. I can even record the most breathtaking moments of creatures one could possibly see in his entire life. Such as when a butterfly pushes itself out its cocoon, spreads its glamorous wings, and finally fluttering into the fields of flowers, or when a mother doe gives birth, and gently licks this new life with care. With the smart glasses, I would capture the beauty of nature in the most touching way.

The reason why I didn't choose the cloak is mainly because I don't need it anyway. I've never fantasized about sneaking up behind someone's back or going to places that I'm not allowed in. Furthermore, I believe such product can cause problems. The true side of humanity is tested when one can't be seen by others. People may do whatever they want, which depends on what kind of person he or she is. Crime rates may increase significantly if the use of the invisibility cloak is not effectively controlled and restricted.

Due to all the reasons above, I believe "The coolest product in the future world" should go to the smart glasses, and I'd be more than glad if I get to try one someday.
