I would like to choose a pair of smart glasses. While the importance of biodiversity couldn't be overemphasized, I would like to offer it to several well-esteemed researchers who could carry out some observations in tropical rainforests or other kinds of extreme environment. Since you could see the things behind obstacles when wearing the glasses, I strongly believed that this advanced gear would help make a significant stride in the field of wild animal studying. Those lush trees could never get in our way once we owned a pair of smart glasses. Moreover, I would like to cooperate with some directors. If there were thrilling scenes with fancy movements which were quite demanding for photographers to capture, we could simply ask the actors or actresses to wear the smart glasses, and the thorny task would instantaneously turn out to be nothing! the smart glasses, not only could we explore the beauty of a variety of endangered animals, but also we could effortlessly regale our eyes with the exciting films, which could benefited both the academic field and the movie industry.

I wouldn't choose the invisibility cloak because I thought the idea of "being invisible" is pretty meaningless. Wearing a cloak may only deepen the sense of loneliness in one's heart, since no one could spot him, and simultaneously no conversation could he engage in. That would definitely turn out to be a life overflowing with depression! Furthermore, many criminals might seize the chance and steal things fearlessly since there wouldn't be a camera which could witness them. An invention, though with undeniable creativity, could be very dangerous due to the potential threat it might bring to the whole society.
