

二、 If I were to choose from the three plans, holding a market featuring local products would be my choice. In my opinion, this could be a great chance to find some unique characteristics of our community while bonding people together simultaneously. In a market with vendors of all kinds, it is likely to catch the attention of passerbys. People may stop to take a look, or have small talks with each other when purchasing at the same stands. On the other hand, featuring local products or works of local artists may give community members a new perspective into what our home holds. Thus, holding a local market is a great way to make new friends and introduce our community to others.

In the local market, it may be nice to hold cooking shows using local agricultural products. Food is the best thing which grabs one's attention, therefore, not only more people will be attracted to the market, agricultural products will also be promoted every time one person tastes the dish. In addition to cooking shows, featuring works of local artists may also be a good choice. Paintings, postcards, photographs can be sold at the market. Not only young artists can have the opportunity to become famous, the beauty of the community may also be unfolded in their works. To sum up, food and art may be the best incentives to arouse a conversation and achieve notice in the local market, that leads to my choice for activities.
