students in them will be petrified with panic. For another, suppose strangers can go inside campuses without permits, they will definitely put students' safety in jeopardy. The above-mentioned problems are all regarding to the campus safety that is nothing to be sneezed at.

As members of the campus, we are supposed to take measures to protect the campus from being at stakes. First and foremost, we students should cherish facilities equipped on campuses and avoid destroying them, which can minimize accidents caused by them. Additionally, we can prompt the school authorities to reinforce security systems, deterring villains from entering campuses. Last but not least, interactions with others should be proper in that the abnormal ones like bullying also poses a menace to the campus safety. In a nutshell, John F. Kennedy once said, "Everyone can make a difference, and you should try it." Provided that each one of us can make strenuous efforts to keep the campuses secure, we can all absorb knowledge and socialize with our classmates in this paradise we build.
