

With various entertainment facilities and a vast playground, the park depicted in Picture A is definitely the most enjoyable place on earth in the eyes of toddlers. Featuring slides for kids to have thrilling rides on, that place is synonymous with "the heaven of happiness for pre-school kids". On the other hand, as demonstrated in Picture B, the park on the right seems to be a place of tranquility and welcomes its visitors with the beauty of nature. Its striking feature may be its endless vigor hidden in the picturesque scenery consists of lush trees.

Sunshine caressed my cheeks as a brisk breeze wafted through the woods, sending me the sweet fragrance of flora. On the lawn not far away from the wooden trail, a dozen of senior citizens were performing tai-chi. My ideal park would be both eco-friendly and user-friendly, especially for the elderly, since aging has been an imminent problem in Taiwan. As the senior citizens had contributed their prime years to our society, it is high time that we held them in high esteem. Therefore, my ideal park would contain adequate space for the elderly to do leisure activities, which enables them to age both gracefully and healthily. As for the ecology part, I have also noticed that people have become alienated from Mother Nature since the Industrial Revolution. Dwelling in concrete jungles, people nowadays are obsessed with materialism, and hardly can we remember where we came from. A walk in my park would restore one's once impaired relationship with nature. In addition, my park would locate in the center of the city, purifying the waste gas emitted by zooming vehicles in the meantime. With all of the benefits mentioned above, my ideal park would not only greet visitors with convenience but hail the nature with its great contribution to the environment.
