The park in Picture A gathers all the elements that a child can wish for. There are slides and other facilities painted in vibrant colors, which playful children will jostle their ways to the front upon arriving. The ground is covered with a blanket of safety mat, lest the children stumble or fall while immersing in this resplendent playground. The park in Picture B, however, adopts a different approach that will attract those who love nature. In contrast to the ceramic pavements often seen in urban areas, the park is teeming with grass and greenery, with few signs of human impact can be spotted. With sunbeams entangling the tops of trees, the picturesque scenery holds the possibility of inspiring artistic expressions, creating a perfect atmosphere for artists such as photographers and painters.

To the best of my recollection, I have been enamored with flowers and their tender fragrance. With that in mind, my ideal park is a garden home to blossoms and flowers. The best time to pay a visit to my park is in the early morning. At a time when sun has barely risen, one can witness shreds of mist still lingering around and droplets of dew resting on the dainty petals. The mesmerizing hues of violets and roses blend harmonizingly, and the blooms of daisies and lavender complement each other. The park elates people with its elegance and soothes people with a serene vibe. If my ideal park existed, I would spend hours just to wander around and unwind. The spiritual experience my garden provokes is why it is my ideal park.
