In picture A, the park is appropriate for people with children. First, the park is spacious for children to run and play. Second, there are plenty of amusement facilities such as slides which are popular with kids. Third, the ground is covered with special cushions which can reduce the impact when children tumble on the ground.

In conclusion, the park in picture A is surely a paradise for kids and their parents. In picture B, on the other hand, the park is a place where people can find mental serenity in nature. Strolling in this park, you can feel the breeze and the bird chirping. Furthermore, there are a lot of tall trees providing shades for you to take a rest on the meadow. Overwhelmed with the hustle and bustle in cities, you can feel relaxed and refreshed in this natural park and continue to face your work and studies.

In my opinion, the ideal park contains three elements.

For the starter, there should be a number of natural scenes in the park including ecological diversity and magnificent scenery. For example, Alishan sunrise and the fireflies in Alishan forest recreation park are quite appealing to me. Standing in front of the picturesque scenery, I can find the peace in my mind. Secondly, I can go to the park with friends and families. The park should be a place where I can strengthen the relationship with my intimate friends and my loved families. We can go picnicking in the park, sitting near the lake and taking a sunbath. Last but not least, whenever I am faced with tough challenges, the park can be a harbor for me to take shelter. In modern times, stress resulting from varieties of problems is an important issue people have to learn to deal with. For me, a park with some natural features is a place for me to calm down and find confidence in myself. In conclusion, a park with beautiful scenes is the ideal place where I can spend time with my families and friends and find the peace.
